General Observations—Looking Forward

Although the trip was difficult in many respects, I see substantial progress in the City of Jalalabad. The Mayor and Governor seem to be doing a good job with municipal improvements. The municipal offices are run in a more business like fashion.

The Rotary School has many students and is functioning reasonably well but there are serious limitations. We need more female teachers to provide for female education beyond grade seven and to increase female enrollment in the grades below grade seven. The school should be run in two shifts to provide for grades nine through twelve. We need English and science teachers and we need to establish an internet connection for our computer lab. We need to have an administrator run the computer lab. Our teachers at the school advise that they need in service training and they will attend if it is provided. We need more community/parental involvement. All of these items are possible with support from the Office of Education in Nangarhar Province and encouragement and direction from the Ministry of Education in Kabul. Fary made the appropriate contacts with the Nangarhar Director of Education and the representative of the Minister of Education to get these items moving forward. Follow up from this end will be necessary to bring these items to a reality.

We have developed a very good relationship with the Chancellor of Nangarhar University (NU) and are optimistic about the formation of a meaningful partnership between San Diego State University and Nangarhar University. Fary's various volunteer trips to Jalalabad have been instrumental in forging this relationship. NU has many needs all the way from infrastructure needs to pedagogical direction. There are many ways to assist using the connections that have been developed with different institutions and individual in the San Diego area. We will continue to pursue these connections vigorously.

The internet lab we provided on the main campus is underutilized and we have discussed this with the Chancellor. There are various possibilities to expand use of the internet throughout the main campus and Dr. Dave Warner has made a preliminary assessment in this regard.

The internet lab we established at the Nangarhar University Medical School is functioning very well. The University of California at San Diego has expressed an interest in exploring expanding the availability of its internet based ESL program for the medical profession. Fary's meeting with the two recipients of this donation, Dr. Mangal and Dr. Safiullah was very encouraging in this regard. More follow up with UCSD is in order at this time.

One issue Fary looked into was female education generally and lack of female educators specifically. These are crucial issues for empowering females in Afghanistan nation-wide. To address these problems several factors should be considered including:

Culture, religion, social status, living accommodations, training, and use of technology.

According to Afghan culture, religion and social status, the family and even the female students themselves do not feel at ease to attend school after sixth grade if they do not have female educator present. Some things are not going to change in the short term but there are ways we can help address this situation. There are a significant number of females who have been lucky enough to graduate from high school but will be denied higher education for the lack of proper and safe dormitories, especially those who are coming from rural areas. Thirty five years of conflict and lack of upgrading university housing facilities has resulted in almost no housing facilities for female university students. Further, there is no up to date pedagogical training and technology available to female university students or teachers in service. We are hopeful to be able to bring attention to these issues and finds ways (and support) to correct the situation in Nangarhar Province.

Fary set the stage for the first visiting doctor from San Diego (Dr. Art Mendoza) to meet with professional counterparts in Jalalabad. We now need to assess the results of that professional visit and plan for more of the same. We also need to explore further the use of telemedicine options to assist the medical/public health community in Jalalabad. Fary's relationship established with Dr. Pardis should prove to be a good starting point in this regard. We are now exploring bringing the internet to various places within the Nangarhar Public Hospital and hope to have this in place in the next few months.

Much progress has been made regarding our Rotary Club's activities in Jalalabad. Many relationships have been established in Jalalabad with various organizations and individuals. There are many organizations and individuals in San Diego who are now participating in these activities as well.

We continue to look forward to a long term involvement in these efforts. One thing is certain—the name “Rotary International” and the word “Rotarian” are both well known and respected throughout the City of Jalalabad.

Respectfully Submitted,

June 20, 2006
